

Like a lot of other students in my situation, I do not often get a chance to go back to my home country, and I get homesick. However, when I eat food that I enjoyed as kids, I get a taste of home that is so amazing that it is hard to put into words. Nothing makes me happier than when I am sitting at the dinner table, surrounded by family, eating Desi food.

Our love for food is an indicator of how proud we are of our cultures. That is because it isn't just about the food- even though food is pretty great- it's about the people who make it and the memories we create when we share it.
